

WEEE DIRECTIVE

DISPOSAL OF REDUNDANT HARDWARE

Recent guidelines from the European Union for the safe and responsible disposal of many forms of electronic equipment have resulted in the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) directive. There is a growing environmental issue due to the build up of redundant hardware and research shows that waste levels are set to increase significantly. With the new directives limiting the amount of electrical and electronic equipment waste going to landfill disposal, WEEE has been put in place to monitor and control this problem area.

The WEEE directive clearly states that everyone, from manufacturers to end-users, have a responsibility to correctly dispose of their computer hardware.

In addition to the WEEE directive, the European Commission has also adopted proposals for the Restriction of Hazardous Substances in electrical and electronic equipment (ROHS).

Kalamazoo-Reynolds' Service

Clearly, the new directive will impact upon most organisations and measures must be put into place to adhere to the guidelines. To minimise the amount of time and effort placed upon companies, Kalamazoo - Reynolds can arrange to, in strict accordance to WEEE and ROHS guidelines, collect and dispose of redundant hardware. The full service comprises:

- Full account management
- Central point of contact
- Environmental & recycling advice
- Complete logistics solution
- Priority collection within 5 working days
- Full asset management of redundant equipment on or off site
- Complete documentation including Certificates of Collection and Destruction - Duty of Care - Consignment Notes - Weights Returned - Asset Management Reports
- Non - liveried vehicles for discretion
- Guaranteed data destruction by shredding data devices

Data Removal

Security of data is a high priority and Kalamazoo - Reynolds will low-level format all hard drives returned to us. For increased security other formatting services are available. If the hard drive is inaccessible it will be physically destroyed.

Prices quoted will include low-level formatting of hard drives or physical destruction where applicable.

Customer satisfaction is key to everything we do
